

About the Trainers:

Ian Dapiaoen is a 2nd generation Filipino American, born and raised in Seattle. He has been with the White Center CDA for two years as their Community Building program manager. Prior to this, he was the Recruitment and Outreach Coordinator for Solid Ground's AmeriCorps programs. He has extensive experience working in the community; serving youth, students, and artists. He is also a former journalist at The International Examiner newspaper, and has used his skills in marketing and communication to reach many diverse communities.

Virgil Domaosan is a Seattle Native with a background in public service and community organizing. For the past two years he has served as the Director of Community Building with the White Center Community Development Association working on base building, mobilization and resident leadership. He grew up in the Beacon Hill and attended school at Seattle University where he studied at the Institute of Public Service. Before working at the White Center CDA, he worked at the City of Seattle in the Personnel Department and volunteered with the Office of Civil Rights. He then worked with the Chinatown International District Preservation and Development Authority as the Manager of the Community Action Partnership.

Workshop Description

During the 2008 Presidential elections, the Obama campaign relied heavily on online social networking tools such as Twitter and Facebook. Learn how to be as effective in your community using these same tools!

This interactive workshop will introduce you to Twitter, Facebook and how to blog on Wordpress. This workshop will be held in a computer lab, allowing each participant to understand and practice online social networking. There will be limited follow up sessions available for Project Empower participants.

Who Should Attend?

Staff and volunteers who want to gain more confidence in using online social networking tools and how to use these tools to mobilize, engage and gain support for their organization.

This workshop will cover:

- Gain knowledge and awareness about online social networking
- Gain online social networking tools and resources
- Practice dissemination of information via online social networking
- Share tips and experiences on the internet that have worked for them
- Build a stronger community through online interactions
